Individual Reflection 5 – Andreas Magnusson

1) Next week, our focus will be on prioritizing the final sprint to ensure the creation of a polished and complete product. It is crucial that we work effectively as a team, even without the incorporation of new features.
2) This week, my main tasks revolved around enhancing the functionality of our existing app. I dedicated my time to debugging two APIs, encountering issues with one that required modification due to a broken system, and another that necessitated adjustments to our calls. Additionally, I implemented a time option for the suggested running days feature, allowing users to select their preferred time. Moreover, I expanded the interface to display more than just three days. Lastly, I successfully integrated a delete button for managing the history of consumed caffeine.
3) I acquired a deeper understanding of debugging APIs and troubleshooting issues and modifying API calls.