Individual Reflection 4 – Andreas Magnusson

1) Next week will be interesting since we really need to start prioritizing what needs to be done since its to sprints left. We need to make a good plan so our app feels like a finished product and I therefore hope to learn more about prioritizing and finishing products.
2) This week I have been further developing the "suggested running days" functionality. Now the user could chose and save their preferred weather and the app will suggest day and time that are the most similar to that.
3) I learned to not overcomplicate things to be able to move on faster with the project and not waist time on not important details. Also learned more about states in flutter.